Local Selective Service List Has 1,545 Names

Draft Act Provisions Are Detailed

26-Year-Olds Put On Shelf

If the call should come, there are 1,545 Pickaway County names that could be immediately tapped by draft board officials.

Total registration in the county is 1,834, of which 289 have reached their 26th birthday, sliding them, under the present law, away from the letter that starts out, "Greetings—"

There are an estimated 3,000 veterans of World War II in Pickaway County, many of whom are listed with active and inactive Reserve groups.

According to the local Selective Service board, the provisions of the extended draft act are identical with provisions of the act before extension, with one exception.

The principal difference, they point out, is contained in the new provision giving the President authority to order any or all units of the National Guard and Reserve components into active duty for 21 months within the personnel strengths provided for in the act.

According to Colonel C. W. Goble, state director of Selective Service:

"The extended Selective Service law, like the 1948 act, requires registration of all young men—with very few exceptions—within five days after their 18th birthday."

"IN ORDER to clear up any misunderstanding as to the place of registration, all the young man has to do is present himself to the local board of registration place designated in that particular area most convenient in the place he happens to be when he becomes 18."

"Because available funds necessitate the most rigid economy in the administration of Selective Service, the place of registration frequently is not the local board office—many of which are open one day a week or less—but its location may easily be ascertained by inquiry at the postoffice, local newspaper, courthouse or city hall."

In Pickaway County the Selective Service office, on the second floor of the courthouse, is open each Tuesday.

"The registration process," Goble continued, "is simple and requires only a short time. The data is sent to the local board of the community he terms his home and which has jurisdiction over him."

When the registrant has a permanent home, the address should be given to registration officials. Goble pointed out that there is no liability for service under the act until the age of 19 is reached, but he emphasized the obligation is to register at 18.

He added that the law is specific on this point and provides a severe penalty for failure to comply.

Goble said the law is also specific in its requirements concerning

Ohioan Enroute To Take Part In Korean Battle

OMAHA, July 7—A 37-year-old Toledo man continued on his way to the Korean battlefield today to aid in the fight against the Communists.

Arthur G. Mocsar stopped briefly here last night enroute by bus to San Francisco where he hopes to get passage to Korea.

Mocsar quit his $60-a-week job with a trucking firm to aid the South Koreans. He telephoned the South Korean embassy in Washington to offer his services, but, although sympathetic, a spokesman did not offer to pay Mocsar's way to the Far East. Mocsar paid his own bus fare and said he would pay for the trip across the Pacific, if necessary.

Explaining that his wife, a took in a Toledo cafe, did not object to the trip, Mocsar said:

Kremlin Now Protesting U.S. Navy's Blockade

LONDON, July 7—The United States was accused by Russia today of committing a new "act of aggression" by its naval blockade of Korea.

The Russians said that the Americans will be held responsible for "all the consequences" of this and their earlier intervention on behalf of South Korea in the fight against Communist North Korean forces.

The Soviet stand was made known in a Tass agency dispatch which outlined the Kremlin's answer to America's note to the Russian foreign office on July 4 announcing imposition of a naval blockade of the Korean coast.

The Russian statement explained that the Kremlin's reply to UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie on June 29 had declared the resolution of the United Nations Security Council on the Korean question was a violation of the UN charter and lacked legal force.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the U. S. Navy announced that its blockade of Korea is completely effective despite reports that Communist forces are advancing along the eastern coast toward the port of Pusan.

Latest reports placed the Communists only 75 miles north of the important port, through which all U. S. troops and equipment must move.

THE NAVY QUOTED Rear Adm. John M. Higgins, commanding the eastern blockading task force, as denying that any troops or supplies are moving down the coast by water.

The Navy, at the same time, cast doubt on reports that American B-29s have bombed four Russian submarines in the North Korean port of Chinnampo.

A Navy spokesman said he was "inclined to doubt" that the craft hit in the port were submarines. He said no photographic reconnaissance was made and that the pilots could easily have been mistaken as to the nature of the vessels.

The Navy also announced that two more heavy cruisers and seven destroyers have left the west coast to join the 27,990-ton Aircraft Carrier Philippine Sea at Pearl Harbor to await "further orders."

The task force, led by the Heavy Cruiser Helena and commanded by Rear Adm. Charles C. Hartman, left Long Beach, Calif., yesterday.

The Navy said that it is running into "tremendous requirements" in its efforts to move supplies and men to Gen. MacArthur to support the South Korean war effort.

A spokesman said that both sea and air transport are "over-taxed," and that it will "take some time" to concentrate enough shipping in the Pacific to relieve the problem.

In addition to the Helena, the warships in Hartman's task force are the Cruiser Toledo and the Destroyers Craig, Parks, Southerland, Wiltsie, Chandler, Hamner and Chevalier.

260 Million More Asked For A-Study

Request Expected To Get Quick OK

WASHINGTON, July 7—President Truman asked Congress today for an additional $260 million for the atomic energy commission with emphasis on atomic and hydrogen bomb development.

The chief executive said in a statement that the United States must continue to "strengthen our own defenses."

Mr. Truman again emphasized that this country is seeking "effective international control" of atomic energy.

But, he said, until such an agreement is reached the United States must go ahead in strengthening its defenses "by providing the necessary atomic energy production capacity."

Russia has blocked every effort made by the United States in the United Nations to effect international control of the atomic bomb.

The President, in asking Congress for the $260 million supplemental appropriation for the Atomic Energy Commission, said that the funds are required "to continue work on all forms of atomic weapons, including the hydrogen or fusion bomb."

THE PRESIDENT said the supplemental funds will be used to build "additional and more efficient plants and related facilities" for those purposes.

Latest reports placed the Communists only 75 miles north of the important port, through which all U. S. troops and equipment must move.

The new money will be in addition to the $647.8 million in cash, plus $300 million in authority to contract for future building and purchases, which has been tentatively approved by the Senate appropriations subcommittee.

Speedy Capitol Hill approval is expected for the additional funds.

Appropriations committee legislators repeatedly have indicated that they are ready to provide all that is necessary for defense—and the Korean developments have spurred their willingness to provide funds for military and atomic purposes.

The President said:

UN Ready To Select Mac As Its General In Korea

LAKE SUCCESS, July 7—Final decisions were reached by Security Council delegates and their governments today to authorize the appointment of General Douglas MacArthur as UN commander-in-chief in Korea, and for display of the global flag.

The Security Council action were purposely left general in itself will be a warning signal to Communist China that the self-proclaimed determination to "liberate" Formosa in no way will deter the United Nations from supporting military action against aggression.

The United States is ready to act immediately after the Security Council vote late today to name MacArthur and have him hoist the blue and white UN flag alongside the Stars and Stripes and banners of other combat nations.

American naval ships, Air-force units, and ground troops will raise the UN flag in the next few days.

The Security Council resolution will be sponsored by Great Britain, possibly with Norway and France, and is expected to be approved by a vote of 7 to 0, with three abstentions. These are Egypt, India and Yugoslavia.

The President said:

The Security Council—with Soviet Delegate Jacob Malik again virtually certain to be absent—is expected to approve a broadly worded resolution asking the United States to act for the UN in the Korean operations.

In effect, the resolution will request that MacArthur will become UN as well as U. S. commander in Korea.

The bill calls for one billion, 390 million dollars less than the amount requested by President Truman.

Earmarked for the defense establishment is $13.3 billion—only $82 million below what President Truman asked, and $383.8 million above what the Security Council voted.

The overall bill provides five billion, 276 millions more than the House approved since the Senate added foreign aid and other money items which had not been asked when the House completed its action.

The foreign aid provisions—economic and military—total $4.6 billion.

One of the largest percentage increases over the House bill is a 31.1 percent boost for the Postoffice Department, raising its appropriations from $401 million to $526.6 million.

ON ARMY CIVIL functions—river and harbor and flood control work, the Senate raised the House figure of $630.8 million to $762.9 million, a 20.9 percent increase.

The Senate committee made reductions for the State, Justice and Commerce departments, cut four percent, and the Interior Department, cut less than one percent.

In comparison with last year's money bill, the military branch figure is up $238 million, while foreign aid is down $909 million.

It was learned that staff members told the committee that they can't lay the 400-page measure on senators' desks before the middle of next week.

The committee met today to wrap up the bill, which it has approved tentatively chapter by chapter.

Appropriations Chairman Mc-Kellar, (D) Tenn., kept the way open to get the bill on the floor by Monday, if it should unexpectedly be ready, by getting permission to file it during the weekend Senate recess.

But staff members pointed out that over-all changes may require the alteration of hundreds of figures, and that it will take time for the government printing office to prepare the 400-page bill and the accompanying report.

SEN. O'MAHONEY, D. Wyo., served notice that he will fight any attempt to make a percentage-wise cut on the chapter his subcommittee handled. He said:

"We made reductions such that there is no need to apply the rider to the independent offices bill."

O'Mahoney labeled as "impractical" another rider prohibiting the filling of more than 10 percent of the vacancies.

Similar action already has been taken on other actual and potential war materiel such as weapons, scrap iron and vehicles.

Draft Act Provisions Are Detailed

(Continued from Page One) concerning the obligation of a registrant to keep his local board informed as to any change in his address—where he may be reached by mail—or change in his status under the act.

THAT APPLIES after the registrant becomes 26 as well as before, Colonel Goble said, "and it means that college and university students, as well as other registrants, should notify their local boards when they leave their homes. There is no form for this. It may be done by mail or personally appearing at the board office."

Explaining the Selective Service process Goble said it begins with registration. Remarking on the fact that the law specifically states that anyone between the ages of 18 and 26 must register, Goble explained that the only exceptions are men on active duty with the armed forces and foreign diplomats and a few aliens under conditions rigidly specified. The 18-year-old men cannot be inducted until they become 19.

The registration card asks a few direct questions, such as the registrant's residence, age, place of birth, occupation, employer, person who will always know how to reach him by mail, service in armed forces, marital status, and so forth. The registrar asks the necessary questions and does the actual work of filling out the card.

When the classification questionnaire is received care is required in its completion, but it is not difficult to fill out.

The questions are direct and in no way complicated. Help may be obtained from the clerk of the local board. The questionnaire must be returned within 10 days.

"The questionnaire," Goble declared, "is of great importance, for it gives the board the basic information on which to decide in which of the classifications a registrant shall be placed."

Present classifications are as follows:

Class 1-A, available for military service. It includes members of the armed forces, the Coast Guard, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Public Health Service, members of reserve components and students taking military training.

Class II, deferred because of occupational status.

Class III, deferred because of dependency.

Class IV, deferred specifically by law or because unfit for military service.

Class V, over the age of liability for military service.

THE LOCAL BOARD is not restricted to information in the questionnaire. The registrant's employer, or his dependents, may submit information, and he himself may appear before the local board, either at his request or on order of the board. The board may call on any reliable source for information, but if it is to be considered in deciding his classification it must be reduced to written form.

A notice of classification is mailed to the registrant. If he thinks it unfair, he has 10 days in which to appeal.

After the local board studies all the facts it has gathered, it decides the registrant's classification. Should the need for men for the armed services arise, the man who is found to be available, insofar as deferments, other than physical, are concerned, would then be sent to an armed forces station for a physical and mental examination.

If acceptable, he would be in Class 1-A. If not, he would be reclassified in IV-F.

When the director of Selective Service receives a call from the armed forces for a certain number of men, he apportions the total among the states, which in turn, apportion it among the local boards. When the local board receives the call, the required number of men are chosen in the order of their dates of birth from among those who have been examined by the armed forces and found to be acceptable. The process begins with the oldest 25-year-old and proceeds downward into the lower age brackets.

The order to report for induction is mailed not less than 10 days before the date fixed for reporting. But the date fixed for reporting is at least 21 days after the date of a notice that he has been found acceptable by the armed forces.

Class V, over the age of liability for military service.

THE LOCAL BOARD is not restricted to information in the questionnaire. The registrant's employer, or his dependents, may submit information, and he himself may appear before the local board, either at his request or on order of the board. The board may call on any reliable source for information, but if it is to be considered in deciding his classification it must be reduced to written form.

A notice of classification is mailed to the registrant. If he thinks it unfair, he has 10 days in which to appeal.

After the local board studies all the facts it has gathered, it decides the registrant's classification. Should the need for men for the armed services arise, the man who is found to be available, insofar as deferments, other than physical, are concerned, would then be sent to an armed forces station for a physical and mental examination.

If acceptable, he would be in Class 1-A. If not, he would be reclassified in IV-F.

When the director of Selective Service receives a call from the armed forces for a certain number of men, he apportions the total among the states, which in turn, apportion it among the local boards. When the local board receives the call, the required number of men are chosen in the order of their dates of birth from among those who have been examined by the armed forces and found to be acceptable. The process begins with the oldest 25-year-old and proceeds downward into the lower age brackets.

The order to report for induction is mailed not less than 10 days before the date fixed for reporting. But the date fixed for reporting is at least 21 days after the date of a notice that he has been found acceptable by the armed forces.

Draft Act Provisions Are Detailed

(Continued from Page One) concerning the obligation of a registrant to keep his local board informed as to any change in his address—where he may be reached by mail—or change in his status under the act.

THAT APPLIES after the registrant becomes 26 as well as before, Colonel Goble said, "and it means that college and university students, as well as other registrants, should notify their local boards when they leave their homes. There is no form for this. It may be done by mail or personally appearing at the board office."

Explaining the Selective Service process Goble said it begins with registration. Remarking on the fact that the law specifically states that anyone between the ages of 18 and 26 must register, Goble explained that the only exceptions are men on active duty with the armed forces and foreign diplomats and a few aliens under conditions rigidly specified. The 18-year-old men cannot be inducted until they become 19.

The registration card asks a few direct questions, such as the registrant's residence, age, place of birth, occupation, employer, person who will always know how to reach him by mail, service in armed forces, marital status, and so forth. The registrar asks the necessary questions and does the actual work of filling out the card."

When the classification questionnaire is received care is required in its completion, but it is not difficult to fill out.

The questions are direct and in no way complicated. Help may be obtained from the clerk of the local board. The questionnaire must be returned within 10 days.

"The questionnaire," Goble declared, "is of great importance, for it gives the board the basic information on which to decide in which of the classifications a registrant shall be placed."

Present classifications are as follows:

Class 1-A, available for military service. It includes members of the armed forces, the Coast Guard, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Public Health Service, members of reserve components and students taking military training.

Class II, deferred because of occupational status.

Class III, deferred because of dependency.

Class IV, deferred specifically by law or because unfit for military service.

Class V, over the age of liability for military service.

THE LOCAL BOARD is not restricted to information in the questionnaire. The registrant's employer, or his dependents, may submit information, and he himself may appear before the local board, either at his request or on order of the board. The board may call on any reliable source for information, but if it is to be considered in deciding his classification it must be reduced to written form.

Global Flag To Fly In Battle Zone

CHOU EN-LAI'S cable said that the Chinese Communists would "liberate" the Nationalist island bastion despite President Truman's order sending warships of the U. S. Seventh Fleet to guard Formosa.

While the Chinese Communist invasion threat was considered a primary propaganda move, Chou En-lai also bitterly attacked the United Nations for its intervention in Korea.

He called the world organization a "pliant instrument of the policy of the United States government."

The prevailing opinion among UN officials was that the Chinese Communist leader's note required no reply from Lie. But this did not rule out the eventual effect of the note upon such UN member nations as Britain and India which have recognized the Chinese Communist regime and urged its admission to the UN.

Vishinsky Said 'On Vacation'

MOSCOW, July 7—Soviet sources said today that Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky is on vacation.

The statement was made in connection with the visit to the Kremlin yesterday by British Ambassador Sir David Kelly, who was received by Vishinsky's deputy, Andrei Gromyko.

It was said Kelly simply restricted himself to expressing hope that the conflict in Korea will in time be settled.

NURSE'S WORK OUTLINED

County School-Age Tots
Nearly All Given 'Shots'

Only five percent of Pickaway County's school-age children have not been immunized against diphtheria.

A semi-annual report of activities completed by County Health Nurse Mrs. Helen Pickens shows that at present 95 percent of the school youngsters have submitted to immunization.

"Special effort has been made to see that all children are immunized," Mrs. Pickens said. "It is recommended that they see their family physician, but if that is not done we will give assistance."

The report shows that the health nurse aided Health Commissioner A. D. Blackburn in administering 134 immunizations during the first half of 1950 to pre-school children, ranging from six months to six years in age.

"THE FACT that two three-year-old youngsters died as the result of diphtheria last Winter is all the more reason for us to concentrate on the immunization program," Mrs. Pickens stated.

In addition to the immunization work during the last six months, the health nurse made 60 "followup" calls in connection with the free x-ray program given in Ashville. Only one of the "followup" cases was found to be positive.

Scarlet fever is becoming less of a problem here, according to the report. Only nine cases were reported and quarantined during the period.

The health nurse was asked by school authorities to conduct 88 inspections of children during the period.

The inspections showed five cases of scabies, 12 of head lice, two of pinkeye and two of ringworm.

In the venereal disease program, the nurse assisted in 10 blood tests during the period.

The nurse also assisted in two pre-school clinics during the six months, one in Ashville and one at Jackson Township. In addition, the nurse aided 40 prenatal cases in the county during the period while visiting 60 new babies and their mothers.

As a final activity of the period, Mrs. Pickens assisted in examining the Pickaway County 4-H Club boys and girls participating in their respective health programs.

The list of 52 Cleveland book joints announced by Western Union at the Senate Commerce Committee Monday is at least two months old, according to Detective Lt. Martin P. Cooney.

Conney said many of the spots had been closed down as early as last March.

Sutton and Cooney claimed they tried to find the big distributor of race news in the city and asked Western Union men for help.

They took weeks to find out that the fictitious "William Kirkland" in the Chester Ninth Building was the man and by that time he had emptied his office, Sutton charged.

3,350 Jeeps
Are Ordered

TOLEDO, July 7—Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., of Toledo, reported today that the United States Ordnance Department has placed an order for 3,350 jeeps costing $22,291,330.

The new jeeps will be a development and improvement of the war-time jeep on which production was begun in 1941. The new model, known as the M38, is designed to ford streams at depths completely submerging the vehicle.

the church basement. The room including a table trimmed in blue, pink and white colors were used in streamers, a center piece of pink roses was used. A circle of chairs surrounded the table where the guests were seated. A Buffet lunch was served with Mrs. John Tigner, Mrs. Ted Vincent and daughter, June assisting in the serving. The out of town guests included Mrs. R. A. Day of Cuba, and her house guest, Mrs. McKnight of Davenport Iowa.

Jenkins said the troop plans to build a 16' by 20' cabin of cement block and steel. Work on the project is to be done by the Scouts, the troop committeemen and masons who donate their time.

"We have about $20 now," Jenkins said. "We figure the cabin will cost about $500.

"We plan to build the cabin piece by piece as the donations come in."

The scoutmaster added that a first work on the building probably will be started this weekend.

The average American family spends one-third of its income for food.

Weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Mills were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mills and sons of Amanda. Additional Saturday evening guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills Jr. of Washington C. H. and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ackley of Mt. Sterling.

THE "WHY" OF KOREA

THE decision to take an active part in the defense of the Korean republic with air and naval forces seems to have been the only practical one to make in the situation, and it was at the moment about the only answer which could be offered to the question of "Why?" which arose as soon as war broke out there. How did the United States permit this thing to happen? We faced at once the familiar accusation that we gave "too little and too late" in previous aid to the republic. The matter is not quite so simple as that, but obviously there was no time to debate it. We had to abandon Korea to its own devices, or jump in and help.

There may have been a way to make South Korea so strong in its own right that the northern Reds would not have attempted conquest. It would pay us to examine the whole affair very closely, with open mind, to see if there was such a way and if so where we missed it. There are other non-Communist governments in Asia and the Pacific area, independent or working toward independence, which need to be strengthened against Communism. We do not yet know quite how to go about helping them.

Much of the fault may indeed be ours. Assistance to Korea was made a political football in Congress this year. This may have had little effect on the physical situation in Korea, but must have had very great psychological effect; it must have chilled the hearts of our friends in the south and lent courage to the Reds in the north. It may well be that the greatest weakness of our position in Asia and the Pacific has been our own indecision. Now we have acted boldly and resolutely in Korea. Our policy of refusing appeasement deserves respect and may get it.

BAD FOR BEARS

A RECENT visitor to Yellowstone National Park, sensing a lack in the surroundings, inquired about the bears. He missed their importunities for food and the pleasant glow of satisfaction he had formerly derived from yielding to them.

The park policeman informed him that the bears had for the most part left the park in search of provender. "We have stopped feeding the bears," he said. "We found it was bad for them. Deprived them of initiative and they got so they made no effort to get food for themselves."

There could be an analogy. Perhaps Americans should take it to heart.

These Days

The MacMillan Company published a fantastic book, "Worlds in Collision," by Professor Immanuel Velikovsky. Parts of this book appeared in Collier's Magazine and Reader's Digest. I read the Collier's version, which at first made an unfavorable impression upon me because of some ancient quotations and names which I doubted; yet upon investigation they established that the author was correct and my memory was faulty. However, I have not read the Reader's Digest version, which Fulton Oursler told me was an improvement on Collier's. Nor have I read the book itself.

Although this book made the best seller lists and seems to hold its place in them, MacMillan transferred the business to Doubleday, a most unusual proceeding in the book publishing business, particularly as related to a current best seller.

So, it appears from what can be learned about it that certain scientists, including leading astronomers, threatened MacMillan with a boycott on their textbooks if they did not rid themselves of Velikovsky's book. Of course, what the learned and liberal professors wanted really was the total suppression of a book which opposes their dogma. Scientists tend to become dogmatic like theologians, whom they denounce as dogmatic.

The professor seems to be seeking to establish the validity of miracles and he has a science of his own to prove his point. This the professional scientists do not like, they assuming that anyone who does not belong to their particular trade union ought to be silenced. As a matter of fact, many of the world's most creative scientists in the past have been men who dabbled and discovered, but were not professors and did not own a PhD. Neither Benjamin Franklin nor Thomas Edison could have qualified as members of the American Association of University Professors.

The queer thing about it is that these folks always shriek about academic freedom. They file petitions and pass resolutions and make a terrific clamor if one of their number is kicked out of a university for teaching what most decent folks still regard as lies. But let someone else, outside the American Association of University Professors, say something which points up the professors as bluffers, and they, the professors, try suppression. Academica freedom benefits only professors.

Bernard Baruch, in his St. Louis speech, said that absolute freedom to think and to teach is "a dangerous romanticism, quite opposed to the naked reality." He said it this way:

"In Democracy, we object to the slightest interference with the freedom of opposition; with the right of investigation; with researchers into truth; or with conclusions freely arrived at. But we, as a country, reserve the right to prohibit teaching that is subversive—that is destructive of our form and spirit of government. We hold there is no academic freedom for those who are compelled to take orders from non-American sources, hostile to the spirit of our very existence. We refuse to surrender the right of self-preservation."

MacMillan owes this country an explanation which thus far has not been forthcoming.

Drug Used for Lung Disorder

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

A NUMBER of new drugs have been tried out in the treatment of lung tuberculosis in the last several years. One of these is called para-aminosalicylic acid, and it evidently has some benefit in many cases.

This drug has no toxic or poisoning effect when properly utilized, and the tuberculosis germs do not develop resistance to it. It is stated that when treatment of tuberculosis with streptomycin has failed, the para-aminosalicylic acid, known as PAS, may be given with good effect in about half of the cases.

Infection of Lungs

Acute tuberculosis infection of the lungs with cavity formation is more likely to be benefited by the PAS than a long-continued infection, in which a great deal of scar tissue has formed. However, even in the latter type of cases, the PAS is effective in certain instances.

During the first few days of treatment with this preparation, sickness at the stomach is commonly present, and it may be necessary to reduce the dose for the time being. This nausea may also be reduced by coating the tablets with a substance which does not permit the preparation to dissolve in the stomach but lower down in the bowel.

The treatment is continued over a period of four months or longer. If, after this time, there is some flare-up of the infection, a second course of treatment may be utilized.

Slight Improvement

Of the number of patients treated by Dr. Henry C. Swanson and his co-workers, more than half had some slight improvement, and in many the improvement was extensive. The benefits obtained compared favorably with those produced by streptomycin. The coughing, expectoration, and fever all became less.

Since this preparation causes no permanent toxic or poisoning effect, the drug may be given with safety over a long period of time. It can be utilized together with the streptomycin treatment.

It also has been noted that when the two preparations are given together, the PAS seems to delay the development of resistance of the germs to the streptomycin.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. V.: I wake up in the night with perspiration. What is the cause?

Answer: There are many causes of night sweats. The most common one, of course, is sleeping with too many covers. However, night sweats are often due to the presence of a chronic infection in the body.

You should have a thorough examination by a physician to determine the cause of the trouble.

of the fever left in it. Ives took his pulse, finding it unchanged. He said, "Later we'll move him back to the bunk, if we can." He took a step and found that he staggered. "I'm done in."

He bent to his work; he became oblivious to the girl and the cabin and the night; he sought the elusive lead, turning his head only when he had to reach for an instrument. The lamps were too near, and the blanket threw back their heat as well as their light, and sweat came to blind him, but he still worked. Silence held the stove. The girl was keeping the fire going; she sent Feather to fill a depleted woodbox, and the water was boiled half an hour. Ives spent this time studying the wound and making his calculations. He scrubbed his hands thoroughly, pouring a chemical into the tin wash basin. He was concerned with possible infection; this "shack was filthy. Clean, rapid work would minimize Cory's danger.

"There may be other lamps around," Ives said shortly. "Rustle them up."

Marybelle found two lamps in a cupboard. The wicks trimmed and the chimneys cleaned, the three were placed upon a shelf so that the light fell from above. Ives had Marybelle scour tin plates and put them behind the lamps for reflectors. This done, Ives directed her to string a rope across a corner of the room and hang one of the blankets from the bunk upon it; he would have preferred a white sheet to catch the light and throw it back, but there was no sheet.

These things done, he placed the dishpan with the instruments upon a chair and was ready to fall to work. He looked at Tom Feather and said then, "Get out front, Tom. Keep an eye peeled, will you? Might be a fellow riding up on a white horse. If he comes, keep him busy out there till I'm finished."

Feather left the shack, and Marybelle said, "What's this about a man on a white horse?"

"I invented him," Ives said. "I just don't want Tom underfoot when I really go to work."

She said, "He belongs to Hammer. Suppose he heads down there and tells Carradine that Cory's lying helpless here?"

"He won't go," Ives said.

"You've known him for a long time?"

NEW YORK—The best young actor in America today, possibly excepting the gifted Arthur Kennedy, is a 26-year-old Nebraskan named Marlon Brando, who rocked theater-goers with the emotional intensity of his performance in A Streetcar Named Desire and shortly will be doing the same thing to movie-goers with his acting in The Men.

At the same time, Mr. Brando is probably the biggest character in America—a footloose pixie with countless affectations and a casualness of dress that makes Montgomery Clift, his rival for the title of Mr. Studied Informality of 1950, seem a conservative banker type by comparison.

Mr. Brando is the Truman Capote of show-business. I studied him at short range today and even after one hour with him, couldn't make up my mind whether he was the complete poseur or just a guy who didn't give a fig. I decided tentatively he was a mixture of both.

We met in the elevator going up to the Universal Pictures offices. We both were 100 minutes late and I apologized, which he accepted with an unenthusiastic grunt.

I wore a blue jacket, blue shirt, blue polka-dotted tie and gray slacks and I felt like Lucius Beebe. Mr. Brando was wearing loafers, dungarees turned up at the bottom, white un-ironed shirt open at the collar and no tie. He did look comfortable. I wish I knew whether that was his purpose or whether he was trying to live up to his publicity.

"The press agent told me to meet you here because your room is being painted," I commented. He just slouched against the elevator and looked at me. Then he shook his head. I guess his apartment wasn't being painted.

We got up to the offices and he promptly took off his shoe and asked a secretary for a needle. Then he sat down and dug the needle into the sole of his foot in quest of a splinter. The sole of his foot was lovely and dirty.

When he got the splinter, he announced the triumph with a piece of profanity that I can't recall ever having heard in a woman's presence before. The secretary just raised her eyebrows, tiredly. "Please," she said.

Some children are so conventional.

FEATHER shuffled away obediently; Marybelle was already doing as she'd been directed. Ives opened his case when it was brought to him; he had chloroform, but he decided not to use it. Ives had Marybelle scour tin plates and put them behind the lamps for reflectors. This done, Ives directed her to string a rope across a corner of the room and hang one of the blankets from the bunk upon it; he would have preferred a white sheet to catch the light and throw it back, but there was no sheet.

These things done, he placed the dispan with the instruments upon a chair and was ready to fall to work. He looked at Tom Feather and said then, "Get out front, Tom. Keep an eye peeled, will you? Might be a fellow riding up on a white horse. If he comes, keep him busy out there till I'm finished."

Feather left the shack, and Marybelle said, "What's this about a man on a white horse?"

"I invented him," Ives said absently. "I just don't want Tom underfoot when I really go to work."

She said, "He belongs to Hammer. Suppose he heads down there and tells Carradine that Cory's lying helpless here?"

"He won't go," Ives said.

"You've known him for a long time?"

"All my life. He came up from Texas with the colonel, I believe. He's a sort of pensioner. Hammer feeds him and clothes him, but he does as he pleases. He's crazy, of course. Mostly, he's still living in Texas, but he has lucid moments. Don't let him worry you."

"He called you Jim."

"I know," he said and frowned.

"It didn't make sense to me, either. But maybe it will. Maybe

"I'm done in."

He yanked the blanket down from the line and walked to the door and stepped outside and sat upon the sill. It was always this and the night; he sought the elusive lead, turning his head only when he had to reach for an instrument. The lamps were too near, and the blanket threw back their heat as well as their light, and sweat came to blind him, but he still worked. Silence held the cabin; once he looked up to see Marybelle across the table, she was staring fixedly at her brother's arm, but Ives didn't think she was going to faint.

Cory came to partial consciousness; a babble poured from his writhing lips. They always talked. Some of them cursed and some of them prayed; and Ives had made his judgment as to which Cory would do, and there lay the surprise. The words were formless and all tangled, but the idiom of the ancient Book was in them. Ives remembered Elisha Lund then and understood; these were the things Cory had learned at his father's knee and they mixed into his torment now and sustained him.

Once Cory opened his eyes, and Ives wished that he'd used the chloroform. Cory tried to raise himself, and Ives said sharply, "Lie still!" Cory sank back upon the table; his eyes closed, and his face was a dead man's face.

A moment later Ives said, "The basin." Marybelle extended the empty wash basin and something rattled on it, and Ives said, "There's the slug. Forty-five, I guess."

Marybelle said, "And every man along the Sombra pack one."

He nodded and busied himself at the bandaging. Marybelle had found very little to qualify for bandages, but the cloths had been boiled and left to dry, and Ives did the best he could. When he was finished, he stepped back, the sweat coming down and blinding him, and he sluiced it away with his sleeve.

Cory opened his eyes and looked hard at him and said, "So it's you!"

Ives said, "Lie back and sleep, if you can. You'll be all right now."

Cory muttered something but did as he was told. His breathing had grown stronger; he fell into a natural sleep, but there was a little

Then he said softly, "Tom, speak up. It's me—Jim. You remember Jim?"

Feather held his silence a moment longer, and then he said in a voice of bewilderment, "You're a sawbones. I looked in the window and watched you. You ain't Jim. Jim was no sawbones. What in tarnation was it made me think was Jim?"

Ives said desperately, "Keep talking! Tell me about Jim!"

Feather said, "I'm all mixed up again. I should have known when you sent me for the black case. A sawbones!" He came to a stand and shambled off, and Ives let him go. There was no way of bringing Tom Feather back; the distance was more than the width of a stamp-strewn clearing—the distance was infinite.

Marybelle came to the door and stepped out. She seated herself beside Ives and leaned her shoulder against his, and suddenly

MOSES LED HIS PEOPLE TO GOD

HE ALSO TAUGHT THEM HOW TO WORSHIP

Scripture—Exodus 4:28-31; 19-20; 35; 40:17-38.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THE CONDITION of the Hebrew people in Egypt was a pitiful one. They had multiplied greatly since the days of Joseph, who had persuaded his father, Jacob, and his family to come to that country when a great famine struck their own land.

Now all Egyptians who had known Joseph were gone, and his people were an oppressed minority group—as we say in this day and age.

Moses, the baby who had been saved from death by the Pharaoh's daughter and brought up as her son, was in exile from Egypt. One day while tending his flock, he saw a bush that was on fire but did not burn. He stepped aside to examine it, and the voice of God came from it, appointing him as the man to take his people out of the Egyptian land to a country which they could call their own.

The Lord told Moses that the Pharaoh's heart would be hardened and he was to show the ruler various miracles or signs that would finally convince him that he should let the people depart.

The Lord told Aaron, Moses' brother, to go into the wilderness to meet Moses and to hear what he had to say. The two brothers had been separated, so the meeting was a joyous one.

Moses divulgued that he was coming back to Egypt, and that he, with his brother, was to lead the people forth when they gained the Pharaoh's permission.

The two gathered the leaders or elders of the people together, told them God's plans for the people, and showed them the signs which were to convince the Egyptian ruler that God was with the Hebrews and he should let them depart.

We skip over the struggle with Pharaoh and the escape of the Israelites, to some months later, when they were encamped in the desert, near Mount Sinai. Moses went up into the mountain to talk with God, and the Lord told him to tell the people,

"Now, therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed, and keep My covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people: for all the earth is Mine: And ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel."

Moses repeated the Lord's

The people prepared themselves, and on the third morning "there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud, so that all the people that were in the camp trembled."

"And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God answered him by a voice."

The Lord gave Moses laws to govern the people, including the ten commandments which were later graven on the tablets of stone. Chapter 35 tells us how Moses asked the people to donate the materials necessary for building the Lord's tabernacle.

All the men and women who were "willing hearted" came to him, bringing their most precious possessions—jewels, uncut precious stones, gold, silver and brass, purple cloth, blue and scarlet, spun by the women. Some women spun goat's hair, and there were "red skins of rams," and badgers' skins which were brought. All things needed were given for the work, including spices, oil and sweet incense.

Then the work began, according to the Lord's directions to Moses, and when it was finished, Moses put the candlesticks in the tent of the congregation, and he lighted the lamps before the Lord.

When all was done, a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle.

"And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation because the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle." Thus did Moses bring the people to God and teach them how the Lord desired them to worship Him. It is a lesson modern Christians would do well to take to heart—that of obedience to the will of God and faith in Him.

Some women spun goat's hair, and there were "red skins of rams" and badgers' skins which were brought. All things needed were given for the work, including spices, oil and sweet incense.

Then the work began, according to the Lord's directions to Moses, and when it was finished, Moses put the candlesticks in the tent of the congregation, and he lighted the lamps before the tabernacle.

When all was done, a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle.

Thus did Moses bring the people to God and teach them how the Lord desired them to worship Him. It is a lesson modern Christians would do well to take to heart—that of obedience to the will God and faith in Him.

"And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation because the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle."

Aged Cards Run Bases Like Kids

All-Star Pitcher Takes Drubbing

NEW YORK, July 7—If those aged, infirm, decrepit and enfeebled St. Louis Cardinals ever get tired—as they were supposed to long ago—it will be from running bases.

Eddie Dyer's brigade of never-say-die hustlers still ruled the National League today, winners of seven straight games in their latest streak which last night all but wiped Cincinnati off the map.

The Cards, who didn't place a single pitcher on the National League All-Star team, faced an All-Star nominee last night in Ewell Blackwell of the Reds.

The home team was slightly less than awed. Blackwell wasn't around to see the first inning of its entirety, but it was so something to see.

St. Louis scored ten times and went on to win the game, 13 to 1, behind the seven-hit pitching of Alpha Brazile, a name which may not be Greek to the Greeks but will certainly do as far as the rest of the National League is concerned.

ON TOP OF all that, the Cards faced the fattening proposition of opening a series with the toothless Pittsburgh Pirates.

Second-place Philadelphia, a game back, has to deal with fourth-place Brooklyn, so it is possible the Cards can make a merry while the Phils and Dodgers indulge in mutual slaughter.

Both the Phils and Dodgers won yesterday. Philadelphia outgunned the New York Giants 9 to 6, and Rookie Righthander Bob Miller chose the occasion to gain his eighth victory in an all-winning campaign.

Three homeruns, not the least of which was Willie Jones' 16th, helped the winning cause.

The Dodgers' Preacher Roe became a ten-game winner by topping the Boston Braves, 8 to 3.

Del Crandall and Bob Elliott homered to put Boston off to an early advantage, but the Brooklyn warclubs spelled out a 16-tattoo off Warren Spahn and Vern Bickford, with Eddie Miksis and Gil Hodges firing two-run homers. This put Brooklyn within half a game of the third-place Bostons.

The Chicago Cubs collected three runs in the last half of the eighth inning to subdue the Pirates in Chicago, 4 to 2.

In the American League, Detroit's league-leaders, who open a vital set with the Cleveland Indians tonight, didn't play yesterday.

IN THE MEANTIME, both second-place New York and third-place Cleveland won to re-

Proximity Eyed In Coming Titan Free-For-All

GOSHEN, N. Y., July 7—The $10,000 Titan Free-For-All, featuring the wonder mare Proximity, will end a three-day stand of Grand Circuit harness racing at Historic Track here today.

The brief stand already has made headlines for the defeat Wednesday of the two top Winterbook favorites for the Hambletonian, Lusty Song and Florican. Both finished behind Stars Pride, owned by E. Roland Harriman and L. B. Sheppard, which won the $10,000 Dickerson Cup in straight heats.

Yesterday's feature, the $10,000 Goshen Cup pace for two-year-olds, was taken in straight heats by Tar Heel, owned by W. N. Reynolds of Winston-Salem, N. C., and driven by Ralph Baldwin.

Reynolds' Lorraine won the Middletown Chamber of Commerce $3,000 28-Class Trot by winning the first and third heats. Poplar Ferry, owned by Poplar Hill Farm of Lexington, Ky., won the second heat.

Uncle Will, owned by G. H. Tipton of Cleveland, annexed the classified $2,000 trot in straight heats, and the Castleton Farms' famous Mighty Song popped home the victor in the $3,500 14-Class pace.

Midget Game Is Postponed

A midget baseball game between youngsters attending the Ted Lewis Park Summer playground program was postponed Thursday night because of wet grounds.

Dick West, supervisor of the playground program, said the youngsters will play the midget hardball game under the lights in the park next Thursday.

During Thursday's playground activities, Don Rolland and Bob Wellington won the two age championships of a pepper tournament.

Friday's park activities were to have been highlighted by a picnic in the shelterhouse at noon.

All-American Finale Seen

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, July 7—Signposts pointed today to an all-American finale between Yale's lightweight crew and the Kent School of Connecticut tomorrow for the Thames Challenge Cup of the Henley Royal Regatta.

Both shells won again yesterday, as did Harvard, which annexed its first heat race in the Grand Challenge series. Dartmouth and Princeton's Hun School were among yesterday's losers.

Both shells won again yesterday, as did Harvard, which annexed its first heat race in the Grand Challenge series. Dartmouth and Princeton's Hun School were among yesterday's losers.

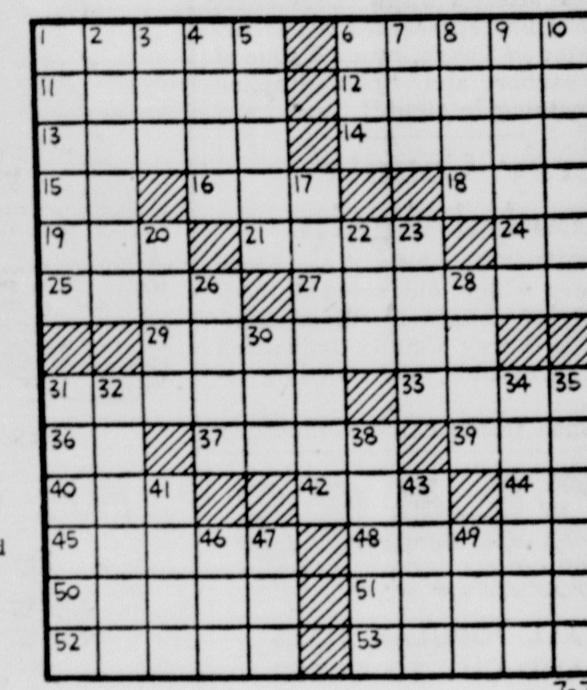

duce the Tigers' league leadership to three and a half games.

Yogi Berra's ninth-inning double with two out scored Gene Woodling from first base to give the Yanks a 5 to 4 victory over the Philadelphia A's, who now stand only half a game ahead of last-place St. Louis.

For Cleveland, Early Wynn held the Chicago White Sox to four hits as the Tribe won 5 to 2.

duce the Tigers' league leadership to three and a half games. Yogi Berra's ninth-inning double with two out scored Gene Woodling from first base to give the Yanks a 5 to 4 victory over the Philadelphia A's, who now stand only half a game ahead of last-place St. Louis.

For Cleveland, Early Wynn held the Chicago White Sox to four hits as the Tribe won 5 to 2.

Proposed Zoning Law Almost Ready For City Council

Panel Needs Cash For Printing Job

Fire Protection Angle Explained

The long-awaited zoning ordinance is ready for submission to Circleville city council—almost. There is first a little matter of money to print the thing to be attended to. And an ordinance asking for an appropriation for that purpose is to be presented to the city fathers during their next meeting.

When the Circleville Zoning and Planning Commission was first organized last year, council appropriated $200 to be used for expenses.

According to Commissioner Leslie May, there was money left in the fund at the end of 1949. "But," he said, "it reverted back to the general fund, and council forgot to appropriate any more for our use in 1950."

He said that rough copies of the zoning bill are in the hands of each members of the planning and zoning commission. If council appropriates funds for expenses incident to preparing it for submission, the bill will soon be in the hands of the legislators—to study, argue over and take action on.

May said the zoning ordinance will take up about 14 printed pages.

THE LAW creating the planning and zoning commission was passed by council in April, 1949. The ordinance requires builders to obtain permits from the commission before erecting new buildings or altering existing ones.

It provides for the charging of a $5 permit fee for the granting of the permit. The legislators inserted teeth into the law. Failure to comply with the building regulations brings a penalty of from $5 to $50 a day.

The regulations require builders to maintain a distance of five feet from the building to the edge of the property line.

Service Director Neuding, a member of the commission, explained that this is primarily to provide fire protection. "If a fire breaks out, firemen have 10 feet between buildings

Idle Pay List Holds Steady

Unemployment in Pickaway County remained virtually unchanged last week, with only one less continued claim for unemployment compensation being filed.

According to a Bureau of Employment Compensation report, new claims filed last week remained the same as the week before, with seven filed both weeks. Continued claims dropped from 104 for the week before last to 103 for last week.

Throughout the state, however, new claims for compensation increased from 7,988 for the week ending June 24 to 9,119 for last week. Continued claims dropped from 64,156 to 62,834.

New GI Bill Being Readied

WASHINGTON, July 7—A new "GI Bill of Rights" in the event the Korean situation requires draft inductions was proposed today in the House.

Rep. Rogers, (D) Fla., said that if the international situation requires President Truman to order inductions under his "standby" draft powers, he will introduce legislation by which the government would pay the insurance premiums, mortgage payments and rents of men ordered into service.

Bids on more than 25 miles of highway maintenance projects in Pickaway County were opened Thursday by the state highway department.

Ohio highway engineering and fiscal needs are currently being studied by the Ohio Highway Study Committee. Recommendations are to be submitted to the legislature which meets next January.

State estimate on the Fayette-Pickaway projects was $37,114, and on the Pickaway-Ross, $7,076.

The projects in Pickaway County call for improvements to 15.31 miles of State Route 56 in Monroe, Muhlenberg, Jackson and Darby Townships, 6.52 miles of State Route 56 in Circleville, Washington, Pickaway and Salt Creek Townships, 3.19 miles of State Route 159 in Salt Creek Township and 1,478 feet of State Route 104 in Wayne Township.

Interior Secretary Chapman will do the dedicating. In addition to Lausche, Ohio will be represented by Rep. Brehm and other members of the state's congressional delegation.

Service Director Neuding, a member of the commission, explained that this is primarily to provide fire protection.

Equipment Distributors Say Ohio 1951 Highway Fund To Be Too Low

COLUMBUS, July 7—The Ohio Equipment Distributor's Association estimated today that highway revenue for 1951 from all Ohio highway user sources will total $118,824,160.

Kenneth O. Dinsmore, executive secretary of the association, pointed out that the figure does not include any possible funds that might be appropriated from the general revenue fund by the legislature.

Dinsmore said an estimated $43,033,560 will be derived from automobile and driver registration fees; more than $74 million from gasoline taxes, and the balance from motor carrier fees and highway patrol fines.

According to the allocation formula of street and highway funds into state, county, municipality and township divisions, new construction on the state system will be limited to less than $25 million.

Subtracting an estimated $9.5 million from the $25 million for right-of-way and plan preparation costs, funds for actual construction would total approximately $15 million.

IF THE ENTIRE amount were used to match federal aid funds—which are expected to total nearly $35 million—the state stands to lose close to $20 million in federal money.

Dinsmore said county highway systems in the state would receive an estimated $33,778,875; the cities $21,063,125, and the townships $6,475,000. Money available for maintenance and repair on the state system would total approximately $27,260,000.

"A solution," said Dinsmore, "to the joint problem of increased highway needs and an outmoded revenue distribution system might be found if state legislators would consider a re-distribution of funds, or an increase in revenues, such as the gasoline tax and license fees."

Ohio highway engineering and fiscal needs are currently being studied by the Ohio Highway Study Committee. Recommendations are to be submitted to the legislature which meets next January.

State estimate on the Fayette-Pickaway projects was $37,114, and on the Pickaway-Ross, $7,076.

Harbor Tours Being Banned

CLEVELAND, July 7—City conducted tours of Cleveland's harbor front will be restricted, as a security measure, in view of the Korean situation.

John C. Wenrick, city engineer, said that "we just won't show anybody around unless we know who they are."

Wenrick said the action was taken after a Japanese visitor, saying he represented a harbor master in Tokyo, made a tour of the harbor and "photographed everything in sight."
